

enepath launches new Eclipse voice trading product suite

A turret solution delivering cost efficiency without compromise

London, Singapore, 29 September 2016 – enepath, the TraderVoice and communications specialist, is pleased to announce the launch of its Eclipse™ product suite. Utilising the latest technology to deliver new voice services that the trading room requires, Eclipse provides top-quality communications, mobility, reliability and flexibility on both a local and global scale, at a cost that has not been seen before in this industry.

Eclipse delivers a turret solution that reduces desk footprint, enables complete free-seating and provides optimal reliability, resiliency and voice quality using a linear cost model that allows a trading desk to scale up and down from one to thousands of turrets as required. enepath, in cooperation with its global partner Telstra, also offers a Turret as a Service (TaaS) option, a fully managed solution with remote hosting and multiple accessibility options including private cloud.

The Eclipse Turret is designed for both buy and sell side trading firms. Delivered as a tablet plus docking station to enable the trader to work both traditionally from an office and in a remote location. Multiple levels of security for users and devices ensures traders operate in a fully secure and audited environment.

Huw Williams, enepath CTO, said: “Our voice trading technology has been developed with today’s traders in mind who are accustomed to multi-channels, touch screens and tablets. Our mission is to enable traders to operate efficiently and with confidence anywhere and at anytime”. He added “the enepath team, with our long pedigree in voice trading solutions, understand that voice hardware is still as important as it ever was. Whilst some in this industry are suggesting that a software only solution is the way to transform the cost model, the Eclipse range addresses the cost requirement without the associated consequences of having to compromise on quality and functionality”.

Matthew Lempriere, head of Financial Services Telstra commented: “We are working with enepath delivering their cutting edge technology through Telstra’s global delivery network, establishing a leading differentiated solution for the financial services market”.

Gavin Davis, CEO at enepath said, “The FinTech sector has much potential for competition and growth and enepath is taking a leading role in this market”. He continued “With the delivery of our new Eclipse product suite and working with Telstra, our global business partner, we are transforming the way people think about, implement and manage the use of voice inside and outside the trading room”.

The Eclipse product set is built on the enepath Adaptive Media Platform (AMP) that delivers a unique, fully distributed private peer2peer IP voice trading network which adapts in real-time to provide redundancy and quality of service. The Eclipse Turret user benefits from business continuity, whilst maintaining the same functionality and collaboration facilities regardless of location.

Compliance capabilities such as high quality voice recording and call history, ensure firms are able to respond to market regulatory requirements and changes easily and efficiently.

End

About enepath

enepath is the complete voice trading solution specialist for today's traders. Transforming the way people implement and manage the use of voice inside and outside the trading room. Focusing on Software as a Service rather than on proprietary hardware and capital deployment for today's traders who want high functionality, mobility, agility, reliability and flexibility on a global scale

With the backing of partner Telstra's global business, enepath's cutting edge technology and regional partners, enepath's clients can benefit from a global delivery network and local customer service.

To find out more about enepath Front Office, Back Office and Compliance packages, please visit our website www.enepath.com or follow us on Twitter @enepath

Media Contact

Melanie Budden

The Realization Group

Phone: +44 (0)7974 937 970

Email: melanie.budden@therealizationgroup.com